The above graphic illustrates on which are the field of study that employer would consider hiring or are currently in demand.

FINDINGS & ANALYSIS: When we surveyed companies “Your company is hiring Job Seekers from which educational background?”, they said Business and administration (67%), Engineering and engineering trade (32%), Manufacturing and processing (19%), Computing (17%), Personal services (15%), and so forth. Interestingly, we noticed that companies are looking beyond the relevant field of study when hiring candidates. Take for instance, companies from Construction sectors say they tend to hire job seekers who have studied Agriculture, forestry and fishery; Business and administration; or Environmental Protection. For a more in-depth understanding of what kind of educational background are being hired in popular job sectors, or if you like to know more about the industry which you intend to work in, do refer to the next page for more insights related to the field of study that is currently in demand by popular industry sectors. As well, this finding will be helpful for companies in certain job sectors to consider other fields of study when hiring.
